

Thursday 23rd June 2011

We were all up at the crack of dawn this morning beating the OAPs to breakfast before heading off to the golf club for a competitive day of golf against Buckinghamshire.

This morning in the foursomes Anna and Scrant clenched a half. In this afternoons singles matches Kaz and Anna won, whilst Scrant and Cath halved.. After finishing my own match I waited for Cath to come through and watched her play. With 4 holes to play Cath was 3 down, she managed to win 3 holes on the trot to make the match all square going up the 18th. Cath earned a hard fought for half on the 18th but was whiskers away from victory as her putt lipped out of the hole on 18. Still, an amazing recovery was managed by sheer determination which I know the whole team are capable of and so a word of encouragement to the team to keep fighting until that last putt drops!

It's great to see so many dark green jumpers and familiar colours of Worcestershire clubs dotted around the course following players and surrounding greens. As 'busy' as I've been, I've had the opportunity to speak to many people, asking what clubs they had come from and if they had any ties with particular players. Believe it or not, not all the spectators are members of the 'Anna Rock Fan Club' or from Stourbridge GC Ladies Section! I had the pleasure of meeting two ladies from Ombersley who did not particularly know any of us players very well but had given up their time to Caddy and support Cath today. I know Cath really appreciated the company and support as well as the help back up onto her feet when she fell out of a bunker on the 11th! Haha!

As positive and entertaining as I try to make these blogs I would like to express some disappointment. It is the second year running now that I have not been invited for champagne party with the ladies from Stourbridge GC. I can only hope that next year my application to accompany them will be accepted, I promise to behave myself! If I had a penny for every time I've said that this week I would be able to afford to host a champagne party of my own! "I promise to behave myself" along with "you can put that in your blog Naomi!" have got to be the most frequently used quotes of the week!

I would like to apologise to Dr D who is actually a lot more competent than I at first made her out to be. Not only can she switch on an electric trolley, but she is also particularly good at throttling 'cheeky blog writers' as they are trying to practice their putting! It's a shame she's not a bit quicker!

If you check out the photo of the day you will recognise Netty! I caught her red-handed during lunchtime. She seemed to be in a bit of a hurry leaving the scene of the crime. Evidence found in her possession was a bowl of chips that had been 'nicked' from the players table! It seems that her opinion on healthy eating has somewhat slackened, I was told from a top secret source that she literally had a bath-full of popcorn in her hotel room!

Staying on the topic of food, Maryann discovered 6 heart shaped Haribo sweets which had been left outside her hotel room door last night! Then during lunch this afternoon she was sharing out some very posh chocolates which she had been given. If you ask me, my money's on the 27 year old Oreo rep!

I hope the girls have a successful day tomorrow, not long to go now and you can have a well deserved rest over the weekend.
